Summer of sports

Hackney primary school pupils take a break during the Carillion Mini Games

PRIMARY school pupils battled it out at a sporting event at Hackney Downs.

Youngsters from Daubeny school in E5; St John and Jerusalem; Berger; St

Dominic's; and Gainsborough, all in E9, spent the day competing in the five different sports on 12 May. Over 30 staff from event organiser, construction firm

Carillion, turned out to help run the fun and games.

THERE was celebration in Hackney as a full seven-day service began on the newly extended East London line this month.

The route – which links Hackney to the south of the capital and boasts four new London Overground stations at Dalston Junction, Haggerston, Hoxton and Shoreditch High Street – was officially opened on 23 May.

It marks the completion of a four-year campaign by the Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, to secure a proper link to the Tube network for the borough.

The Council has organised a free street party on 6 June, showcasing music and dance from local acts, food from around the world and family entertainment to celebrate.

Mayor Pipe said: "Hackney's new London Overground stations and improved North London line mean it's now easier to get around the borough, and with our continued investment into Dalston town centre, there are now even more reasons to visit the area's many cultural attractions and diverse restaurants.

"The Council worked hard to secure improved transport for our borough and now we have the connections an inner London borough deserves.

"We would like to thank our residents for their patience during the works and to celebrate the opening of our new stations by inviting them to a free street party in the heart of Dalston."

A full service of 12 trains an hour is now running from Dalston Junction to New Cross Gate, where the line splits, with four trains an hour going further south to West Croydon, Crystal Palace, and New Cross.

Transport for London (TfL) said it expected 33million people to use the service in the first year and marked the occasion by giving away 10,000 free tickets on the line on 23 May.

TfL will extend the line north to Highbury and Islington by spring 2011, and further south to Clapham by 2012, with a planned 16 trains an hour running through the borough by that time – equivalent to Tube frequency.

Ten museums, including Hackney and Geffrye, have launched a programme of events to encourage travellers to add cultural stops to their journeys.

Message from the Mayor

Delivering on commitments

THE recent elections saw a very high turnout of Hackney residents and the results, along with the many conversations that took place on the doorstep, made residents' priorities clear. The country is now in a new political environment. The newspapers in recent days have been full of stories anticipating major financial cuts, amid speculation and fears about how much money is left in the national pot. With on average four out of every five pounds spent locally coming from central Government, every council in the country is preparing for difficult times.

The recent elections saw a high turnout of Hackney voters make priorities clear

Against this background of uncertainty, I want to reaffirm my intention to drive forward fully my commitments for Hackney for the next four years, delivering on the pledges I made.

The Council has worked hard over recent years to improve services while keeping Council Tax down, freezing it for the past five years. I am determined that improvement will continue, while still keeping the Hackney element of the Council Tax as low as possible.

We will continue to work with the police and residents to deliver a year-on-year reduction in crime, and tackling anti-social behaviour, including the more minor, but still annoying problems of noise and dog nuisance.

We will deliver a cleaner, more sustainable borough. We will help residents to save energy and recycle more. We will make our streets safer for pedestrians and cyclists.

We want all our secondary school GCSE results to be higher than the national average, and we intend that all our primary schools will be assessed as 'good' or 'outstanding'.

We will deliver more Decent Homes so that our tenants can live in comfort. And at a time of housing shortage, we intend to deliver one of the largest affordable and council house building programmes in London.

I was re-elected to deliver on these commitments, and it is my job to work to protect the services on which Hackney people depend.

Earn and learn

By Olaide Oyekanmi

YOUNG people who are keen to earn money while they learn new skills can apply for an apprenticeship with the organisation that manages the borough's Council housing.

Hackney Homes wants to receive applications from young people, aged 16 to 19, who are interested in learning a trade.

Positions are available for seven young people who want to learn electrical, plumbing, carpentry and multi-skilled trades.

Applicants must have Grade C or above in Maths

“We are proud to continually produce highly skilled workers” and English GCSE.

As well as learning from qualified professionals, the successful applicants will also be supported to get a recognised NVQ qualification.

Danny Ross recently completed his apprenticeship as an electrician in the shortest time in Hackney Homes' history. He said: "To earn and learn is the best way to do it. Doing it quickest was a highlight, but as long as I did it, it didn't really matter how long it took."

Charlotte Graves, Hackney Homes Chief Executive, said: "Every year, we have a fantastic response to our apprenticeship scheme, and we are proud to continually produce highly skilled and well-qualified workers."

The deadline for applications is 18 June.

Lord Sugar with the teenage hopefuls taking part in the BBC's new Junior Apprentice series

Like it or lump it

By
Marcel Reinard

LORD Alan Sugar of Clapton was as uncompromising as ever as he addressed 'Junior Apprentice' contestants during filming at BSix college.

The first episode of the new BBC1 entrepreneurship series focuses on teenagers. It saw Lord Sugar return to his roots for the first episode at BSix, then called Brooke House School.

BSix Principal, Ken Warman, explained: "We had to sign a confidentiality agreement before they would speak to us in detail as they were worried the place would get mobbed."

Filming took place last September. In the show, Lord Sugar described memories of his old school where he 'differentiated quadratic equations'; 'played Curio in Twelfth Night'; and started his first business.

The Junior Apprentices then set off to begin their first task, selling cheese in London markets.

The series sees 10 young contenders, aged 16 and 17,

“They were worried the place would get mobbed”

compete to become the winner of the first Junior Apprentice, who will receive a prize tailored to his or her career prospects, worth up to £25,000.

Ken also described a co-incidence that happened two days after filming at the college, when a young man approached him in Selfridges offering cakes for £8. He refused, but seeing TV cameras, realised he himself was in an episode of Junior Apprentice.

"First thing I thought was 'four cupcakes for £8? I knew Selfridges was expensive but there's a limit'," he said.

Learning, by George

By
Marcel Reinard

BBC newsreader and long-time Hackney resident George Alagiah was among the hits of this year's Adult Learners' Week.

It featured over 80 events at libraries across the borough, including a talk from George at Hackney Central Library on 18 May about his personal history as a Sri Lankan immigrant to Ghana, and his later move from Ghana to the UK, as well as his beliefs about multiculturalism.

As part of the evening, George read extracts from “Bar elections or the odd earthquake I don't get to get out much these days”

A large crowd of residents, including Hackney Today reporter Marcel Reinard (below, right), gathered at Hackney Central Library to hear George Alagiah (top) speak his auto-biography. He said: “This is the first time I've given a talk about books in Hackney – an area where I believe multiculturalism has been a success.”

He added: “I used to travel all over as a foreign correspondent, but bar elections or the odd earthquake, I don't get to get out much these days.”

Adult Learners' Week, from 15 to 21 May, offered residents a chance to participate in taster sessions for a whole host of educational, health and training-related courses, including baby first aid, financial advice, growing fruit and vegetables, learning holiday Spanish, and yoga.

Kim Wright, the Council's Corporate Director for Community Services, said: “We are committed to supporting residents to access education and new skills, and Adult Learners' Week is a good way to do this.”

Hackney libraries offer free, educational services all year round, including online driving theory practice tests, Life in the UK citizenship practice tests, and learning English as a second language resources.

Volunteer Desiree McLeish (left) and 77-year-old grandmother-of-five Edith Hyatt

By James Willsher

DESIREE pops round to see Edith every week for a chat and a trip to the shops, as part of a free service for older residents.

Volunteer Desiree McLeish has been visiting 77-year-old grandmother-of-five, Edith Hyatt, for just over a year, after Edith approached the Council about its Befriending Scheme.

They both live in central Hackney and get on very well together. Desiree drops by for an hour and a half each week, helping out with a range of things, including by accompanying Edith on trips to the doctor, or to the shops in Mare Street.

Edith said: "We have a good time together, we're like a family," adding that it was easy and straight forward to sign up to the scheme.

Desiree, 56, found out about the Befriending Scheme through an advertisement in

"It's helping elderly people, and that's rewarding. I'd absolutely recommend it"

Hackney Today. She also volunteers at the Sam and Annie Cohen Day Centre, in Upper Clapton. She said: "It's helping elderly people, and that's rewarding. I would absolutely recommend it."

Residents aged 50 and over, who may be housebound or feel isolated, can benefit from a range of services offered by the Council's Befriending Scheme, including home visits and telephone calls from trained volunteers.

All volunteers are security checked via the Criminal Record Bureau (CRB), and in addition training, support and supervision are also provided.

Kim Wright, the Council's Corporate Director for Community Services, said: "This is a good example of how the people of Hackney care for and support one another. Older people have helped make Hackney the great place it is today, and the Befriending Scheme helps recognise this."

Lessons to float your boat

BUDDING paddlers now have the chance to take beginner lessons, thanks to the launch of a new programme at Lea Rowing Club.

Explore Rowing is aimed at over 16s who prefer learning in a relaxed, non-competitive way.

The scheme has been made possible by a British Rowing grant of £12,500 towards boats, which will be matched from the club's funds. The new boats will also be used for fun events with other local clubs and for touring the river. A further grant of £3,500 has been received to train coaches for the project. Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, helped launch the scheme at the Springhill club on 9 May.

New hub for volunteers

VOLUNTEER Centre Hackney (VCH) is due to open its new headquarters for the first time on 1 June.

Formerly known as Hackney Voluntary Action, for the last 13 years the centre has given advice to individuals and organisations about volunteering.

During the launch, there will be a drop-in event from 2-7pm at the new base of 12-13 Springfield House, 5 Tyssen Street, E8, with a ribbon cutting scheduled for 3pm.

And on 7 June, the organisation is holding its annual Volunteer Achievement Awards in Clapton, recognising the key contribution to community life made by volunteers. In the past year, VCH has advised more than 1,200 individuals on volunteering, found placements for over 200 people, and run 11 courses in volunteer management for 92 students.

AUDITIONS and workshops are being held for a creative project inspired by the classic musical 'West Side Story'. Not-for-profit organisation Urban Culture Project (UCP) is looking for performers and backstage staff to take part in a new show that is inspired by the Leonard Bernstein musical to create an original performance piece set in Hackney's Holly Street Estate. UCP said it is particularly interested in people with 'experience, enthusiasm and talent in dance, stage design, singing and music'.

The organisation works to link creative professionals with local communities to engage residents.

The project is being funded by the Council's Culture Team, Awards For All, and law firm Allen & Overy.

Rehearsal and workshop dates run from 29-30 May at Queensbridge Community Centre, 30 Holly Street, E8.

Performance dates are set for 6-8 August. For more info, visit:

THE hunt is on for the best new buildings and public spaces in the borough, following the launch of the Hackney Design Awards 2010.

Anyone can nominate buildings or spaces that showcase high quality design, from architects to residents who have spotted an outstanding building in Hackney.

Arts venue Rivington Place, EC2 was commended in the 2008 Hackney Design Awards

Public and private buildings for residential, commercial, community, educational, or industrial use are all eligible for the awards. Alterations to existing buildings can also be nominated, including extensions, refurbishments, conversions or restorations, as well as parks, gardens, pedestrian or play areas that include structural design elements.

Entries will be short-listed and judged by an independent panel, and the final awards ceremony will be held in November.

Buildings must be in the borough; have been completed no earlier than 1 September 2008; and be fully functioning by the closing date for nominations on 2 August.

Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: "The Design Awards are a celebration of the great design and architecture in Hackney. The Council continues to

The churchyard gardens have existed since medieval times and today provide a green oasis in the heart of the borough. The restoration work began in 2006 and included tomb conservation, replanting of trees and plants, a new play space and improved lighting and signage.

People's Choice award

The Hackney Design Awards have been running every two years since 2004.

For the first time, the 2010 competition will include a People's Choice award.

This is a chance for anyone to vote for their favourite entry from a short-list drawn up by the judging panel.

All short-listed entries will appear in Hackney Today and on the Council's website in early October.

Hackney pupils get ready for a summer of sport

By

Marcel Reinard

PUPILS from five of the borough's primary schools battled it out during a multi-sport event at Hackney Downs.

Youngsters from Daubeny school in E5; St John and Jerusalem; Berger; St Dominic's; and Gainsborough, all in E9, spent the day competing in the Carillion Mini Games.

Over 30 staff from the construction firm, which is building the media centres for the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, volunteered to help organise the fun and games on 5 May.

Five-strong teams played each other for five minutes, in five events: boccia, football, handball, and tag rugby for boys and girls. Pupils also practiced field events in preparation for the Personal Bests final on 7 July.

Squads from Berger won both the handball and football; St Dominic's won the boys' rugby; St John and Jerusalem the girls; and Gainsborough snatched the boccia title.

Organiser Lauren Bennett said: "There were many smiles and tears when the results were being announced and teams were getting knocked out and put through. These were from kids and volunteers alike."

All schools received £100 in sports vouchers for taking part. The winning pupils won £40 worth of sports vouchers each, and runners up received sports bags and drinking bottles.

The Hackney-based media centres for London 2012 will be home to around 20,000 journalists who will report the Games to an audience of billions worldwide.

The London Youth Games

TEAMS and individuals from Hackney are set to join over 20,000 young people in the annual London Youth Games. Participants from the 32 London boroughs and the City of London compete in over 30 different sports.

The results from all the different events are then added together and the top overall borough wins the Jubilee Trophy. The London Youth Games began in 1977, as part of the Queen's Silver Jubilee celebrations, and has provided competitive sporting opportunities for young Londoners ever since. The competition – open to those aged 11 to 18 – began in February with a cricket cup and finishes with finals at Crystal Palace on 3 and 4 July.

Two thirds of the borough's primary schools now take part in the Personal Bests programme

Personal Bests

HACKNEY Personal Bests is a health-based sports programme that involves learning in the classroom, as well as sports training. All pupils who take part receive an interactive work book, which includes health messages, a personal lifestyle diary, and information about the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. The nine to 11-year-olds record their personal best scores in discus, javelin, shot put, long jump, triple jump, speed bounce and boccia. The final event will take place on 7 July at Hackney Downs for the children who have shown the greatest levels of improvement. This year, the programme, organised by the Council's 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Unit, is running in two thirds of the borough's primary schools.

Room to roam

Hackney resident Robin Turner has been awarded this year's CREATE Art Award – which he is using to bring a taste of the rural life to city folk

By Louis High

SORRY if I'm a bit flustered, I've just done an old friend a favour by spending the morning dressed as a bear.

The winner of this year's CREATE Art Award sits down at the table and takes a sip of coffee. "Yeah, a friend of mine called in a favour first thing, and I had to stand in as one of 'The Two Bears' which is his act, otherwise, well, it would have been 'The One Bear' wouldn't it?" he says.

Robin Turner can turn his hand to all sorts, he once played a DJ set in front of Fidel Castro in Cuba with Manic Street Preachers. "My crowning moment," he confesses.

The CREATE Art Award is the largest art prize of its kind in the UK – given to a project that involves the participation of others. It is part of CREATE10, an annual art festival that celebrates homegrown talent, cultural institutions and iconic venues in East London, during the build up to the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

Robin's 'Roam' is a mobile arts space and reading room that will pursue the pleasures of a slower pace of life in the East End. He explains: "I got the idea while sitting in my office during a particularly bad period working in the music industry. My colleagues and I would stare out at the canal and wish for an easier, more rural way of life."

“ Hackney is the centre of creative arts in London ”

Each evening Robin's specially commissioned 'Roam' vehicle, a converted mobile library, will become the smallest arts space in London presenting acoustic gigs, DJ sets and audio installations, along with readings and talks from residents on East London's nature, art and history.

"I want Roam to give a stage to East London's natural gems, from fishing to bird watching and mud-larking, to wild swimming and nature photography, to poetry. People will be able to come along and just listen to the sounds of the country inside the vehicle," he explains.

What does Robin think of CREATE overall? "I think it's brilliant," he exclaims. Adding: "There are so many events that everyone can take part in. It acts as a great umbrella, and since it is linked to the five host boroughs for the 2012 Games, it's like having an arts legacy before the Games have even happened. To me that's far more important than three or four weeks of sport."

Robin first moved to Hackney in 1990, while he attended college in Whitechapel. "I moved back here four years ago with my partner. We were drawn back because Hackney is the centre of creative arts in London. I love it because, in Hackney, you can still sit in a pub with a pint of ale and discuss radical politics with the guy at the table next to you, and my partner can go raving at a bar in Broadway Market," he says.

Robin believes his greatest achievement so far is his daughter Pip. "She hasn't been out of Hackney yet, although she is only six weeks old, so there's plenty of time for that," he adds.

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: If I put my food waste in my normal rubbish bin it goes to landfill and rots away anyway, so why should I bother to separate it into a Blue Bin to be recycled?

A: When you put food waste in your normal rubbish bin, it ends up in a landfill site, where it breaks down without air and produces methane, a gas which contributes to climate change. It also produces leachate, a substance that harms the natural environment. However if you separate food waste and recycle it using the Council's Blue Bin collection scheme, it is very quickly turned into compost, significantly reducing the amount of harmful gases released into the environment. An added bonus is that compost made from the food waste is then used in Hackney's parks and green spaces to provide nutrients to the soil.

Hackney's recycled food waste was used to make the compost on offer at a give-away day in May

Residents help themselves to free compost – and get to know the creatures that live in it

All stories by
Naomi Ocansey

MORE than 150 residents attended the Council's free compost day on 8 May, which encouraged visitors to have a go at growing their own fruit and vegetables at home.

Held in Haggerston Park, as part of national Compost Awareness Week, the event also offered lots of activities for children and a tree sculpture exhibition. The Council's expert, Dr Compost, was also on hand to answer any questions residents had about compost and using it at home.

The opportunity to stock up on free compost proved to be a big hit, with residents taking away 13,000 kg, as did a seed and seedling swap.

Jeff McMillan said: "The day was very good, and it was great to be able to pick up free seeds and bags to help me on my way to growing my own."

"Experts on hand also helped a lot too."

On 7 May, around 40 residents from six London boroughs including Hackney, also took part in a London Waste Limited tour of its composting plant, the Ecopark, in Edmonton, where Hackney's food and garden waste is composted. Blue and Brown Bin scheme users got a chance to learn how the process works, from start to finish.

Making beds beside the canal

A COMMUNITY group is working on an imaginative project to improve the look of the Regent's Canal – as well as attract more wildlife.

Working with British Waterways, over 35 volunteers from Rosemary Works Community Association (RoWCA) have developed a site on a stretch of the canal near the De Beauvoir estate, and are responsible for its upkeep. As part of the project, the community group – whose members range in age from eight to 64 – have planted a wide variety of plants to support existing wildlife including bats, insects, and birds, as well as attracting new species to the site.

The Council donated 3 tonnes of recycled compost to the project. Association member, Daniel Rigamonti, said: "The project has brought residents closer together, and made the wider community take notice of the canal and the local environment."

Three flowerbeds have been installed, with plans for another four.

The association is also hoping to get a local primary school involved, and take part in workshops on wildlife, gardening and the environment. Children can grow flowers to plant in the beds.

Other future plans include working with local artists to create biodiversity themed artwork to display at the canal-side garden site.

Residents zero in on waste

RESIDENTS at Follingham Court, N1, got together to learn about producing their own food with limited space, and setting up a growing club on the estate.

The day was a chance to find out more about a community composting scheme on the estate.

Those who were not already taking part, were given caddies, so they could start composting their food waste. Plus there were tips on growing food in small spaces, even if it is just a window box, and free eco-goodie bags were handed out.

Resident Amaia said: "This has been a very interesting and fun day with my neighbours. I have picked up my caddy and can now begin composting my food waste. I can't wait to see my vegetables grow on my window sill and to get together with my neighbours to bring all the raised beds behind the estate back to life."

The event on 9 May, was part of the Government's Zero

Waste Place scheme, which aims to prevent waste, conserve resources and make the best use of materials. Follingham Court is one of 13 such pilot projects in the country.

"I can't wait to get together with my neighbours to bring back all the raised beds to life at the back of the estate"

The scheme is supported by Hackney Council, London Community Resource Network and Shoreditch Trust.

No Race (above) played to the crowd that turned out for the Vortex Outdoors festival in Gillett Square (below)

BSix play square

By
Marcel Reinard

MORE than 1,000 people enjoyed an afternoon of soul, funk, reggae, jazz and hip-hop in Gillett Square that displayed some of the borough's best musical talent.

The Vortex Outdoors festival opened with a performance by BSix college students No Race. The seven-strong band showed off material they had worked on during two workshops run by musicians from arts collective BrazenBunch.

No Race shared the bill on 9 May with local artists including Aruba Red, Don-e, Jamnie Woon from Clapton, and Shane Solanki, who performs under the name Last Mango in Paris.

The square is home to the Vortex Jazz Club – which organised the event, alongside BrazenBunch, and community interest company, Hackney Co-operative Developments – as well as arts organisations, music shops and a funk music bar.

Paul Richards, of BrazenBunch, said the day's aim was to 'bring a unified community together and provide a high quality event that was completely free and accessible to all'.

Dalston-based artist Gina Southgate captured the performance of Don-e – currently working with Grace Jones – on canvas, to produce a live painting of the performer on stage.

Fashion revival

Hackney finalist Charlie Ibouillie

YOUNG designers have exhibited their own designs inspired by the Renaissance and medieval eras.

Over 100 art and design A-level and BTEC students – including eight from Hackney – were selected to take part in 10 weeks of workshops with fashion professionals and practising designers.

During the FAD Fashion Futures 2 project, the students conducted research in the Victoria & Albert Museum's new Renaissance and medieval galleries.

They produced technical drawings and created original garments.

The judges' favourite young designers were selected for the next stage – a week-long summer school at The University of East London.

Charlie Ibouillie, 17, from Hackney Community College, and Misbah Siddique, 17, from Clapton Girls' Technology College will join 23 others from across London and Manchester to present their designs on the London Fashion Week catwalk in September.

In 2009, former BSix College student Aminata Kulufua took part in the catwalk final. She was subsequently offered a two-week placement with the design team at River Island and is now studying Fashion at Hertfordshire University.

10 new laptops for primary pupils

CHILDREN from Gayhurst Community School were given 10 new laptop computers worth £2,200 by MetLife Europe during a visit to the firm.

Teachers and pupils from the Hackney primary school visited the insurance company's European office in Canary Wharf to collect the computers, adding to the five the school already have.

Andrew Orphanoudakis, ICT co-ordinator at Gayhurst, said: "Many of the children at our school do not have computer access at home, so we are doing as much as we can to develop useful life-long computer skills in school. But in the face of tightening budgets that can prove difficult.

"MetLife's donation is very much appreciated."

Dominic Grinstead, Managing Director at MetLife's UK Branch, added: "We are committed to do what we can to help in the local community and hope that the donation will benefit both teachers and pupils at Gayhurst."

The donation is part of MetLife's charity programme, which last year raised over £30,000 for health and social care services charity Sue Ryder Care.

Gypsy Roma Traveller History Month

From 27 May and throughout June in Hackney

THE unknown is always likely to ignite fascination; exotic popular myths and fear can thrive where facts fall short.

There are only a few records of the Gypsy, Romany and other travelling communities' impact on society – despite living in the UK for more than five centuries – but stereotypes and persecution dating as far back as the Tudors. But the largest ethnic minority group in Europe – travellers number around 12million – has historically lent words to the English language, brought bohemian fashion to catwalks and introduced flamenco dancing to the world.

Hackney is underscoring the richness of this proud community as part of Gypsy Roma Traveller Month with a series of events taking place across the borough.

These free events will touch on, among others, Irish traveller traditions with boxing workshops; the importance of storytelling; and Turkish Romany dance.

REVIEW

Annie Grace as Mrs Darling and (below) Kevin Guthrie as Peter Pan

No need to grow up

By Louise Hudson,
Dalston resident

Peter Pan, Barbican Theatre, until 29 May. Suitable for ages seven upwards.

HOTLY hyped, the National Theatre of Scotland's new version of Peter Pan is definitely another 'something different' from the Barbican. David Greig's re-telling of this children's classic is a joy from magical start to finish. Set in Victorian Edinburgh, the building of the Forth Bridge provides the atmospheric and eerie backdrop to the Darling residence, where the superbly mischievous Peter first loses his shadow, and then finds Wendy.

The production is fabulous, with slick direction and ingenious use of set, animal characters and the 'fire' fairy Tinkerbell. Equally enthralling for children and adults alike, the play is beautifully atmospheric, darkly lit with wonderful sea blues, greens and purples, swaying sea shanties and haunting Scottish fiddles and flutes. Captain Hook is skin-headed and tattooed; an incredibly believable baddie to the fearless and plucky Pan, and the chemistry between Peter and Wendy is played brilliantly. The touching story of the Lost Boys, with their dreams of family and a mother's love, is still resonant to our modern ears; their unruly gang not so many miles away from the streets of today.

Hear the word in N16

By Marcel Reinard

Stoke Newington Literary Festival, 4-6 June, various locations.

FRANKLY, the wealth of creative talent on its way to Stoke Newington this June is on the verge of being frightening.

Whatever your philosophical and political leaning, it's hard to not be inspired by the sagacious words of Tony Benn (above); be thoroughly thought-provoked by AC Grayling; or dry retch from a Stewart Lee or Shappi Khorsandi comic turn.

All are mere droplets of the diverse popular persons and top writers speaking and participating at what will be the first Stoke Newington Literary Festival. Storytelling and heady debates will take place at various locations in N16, beginning at the newly reopened Stoke Newington Town Hall's Assembly Rooms. Over two days many of the area's pubs – yes, there will even be a talk on the benefits of the local boozer – and cafes will also lend their floors to foodies, gardening experts, Gothic and science fiction writers, radicals and dissidents or just those who have had, and continue to have, an interesting story to tell.

Rising stars in music

By Ruth Garland

TWENTY ambitious young Hackney musicians will represent the borough at a live music event on 17 July at the IndigO2, one of London's premier music venues.

The musicians have all been selected to take part in 'Rising Stars', a mentoring programme organised by charity Rising Tide. The show is being promoted by Young London: Into Music, a programme of mentoring and performance in the five 2012 Olympic and Paralympic boroughs. It takes place over the summer to promote and support the next generation of music-makers.

Leading up to the show, which will also feature major UK stars such as Nate James, Cherri V and Kele le Roc, Hackney's 20 rising stars will receive intensive advice, support and mentoring from industry professionals.

Andrew Murray, 26, aka Size 10 – after his shoe size – discovered his talent for singing, rapping and composing three years ago when he attended a workshop at the Youth Centre in Holly Street.

“Music is more a part of me than I thought”

“I found something I didn't know that I had,” he said. “Music is more a part of me than I thought. Since then I've put in a lot of dedication and time and made a lot of sacrifices,” he added.

After three years in the army, followed by a difficult period which included six years in jail, Size 10 is now preparing an EP single for release this year. Last month, he appeared on Jazzie B's show on Radio London. He said: “I want to make music a career and improve so I can be the best I can. I was involved in negative; now I'm involved in positive. I think there's a lot of positive in Hackney that we're not looking into.”

Young London: Into Music is a key strand of CREATE10 – the annual arts festival organised with help from the London boroughs of Hackney, Greenwich, Newham, Tower Hamlets and Waltham Forest.

Goals through football

By Chris Warburton

THE Arsenal Kickz programme uses football, basketball, and rowing to engage young people and help them create a brighter future.

John Keyes, who brought the football programme to the Gascoyne estate, says: “I was happy to get a grunt out of the kids to start with.

“Once they realised I was a football coach people started to get involved.”

Participant Mici was often in trouble before meeting John. Now a level-one qualified coach, he shows how sport programmes help people. He said: “Arsenal Kickz saw the good in me and helped me straighten out. Now I love what I do.”

John has proved an inspirational character, earning the respect of the Kickz players by listening and helping with issues affecting them.

“John loves his job, and Kickz works with girls too,” said football fan and What's Up reporter Billie, 17, adding: “Get involved you have nothing to lose – you can only gain.”

Volunteer to make a difference

TEENAGERS in Hackney are invited to help improve their community and set themselves apart in the job market by gaining skills in a new voluntary scheme.

Young Hackney Volunteers Project is run by national charity CSV, and funded by the Council's youth service. It aims to recruit 900 young people, aged 13 to 19, during the two-year programme.

Volunteers will showcase their talents through art and entertainment events; spruce up the borough with environmental campaigns; and pick up new skills through DIY projects. They will also work with community and youth groups to help them establish their own volunteering programmes.

Project Manager, Mira Ruskin, said: “We aim to give young people a voice – to increase their confidence and empower them.”

The project will develop a young person's advisory group to make sure their ideas for the programme are taken into account.

HiP-py birthday

Rebecca Middleton-Davies, seven, with specialist play worker Kate Blackshaw

By
Marcel Reinard

Specialist play worker Kate Blackshaw became a human canvas at an event to mark the first birthday of Hackney Independent Forum for Parents/Carers of Children with Disabilities (HiP).

Chair Roz Grainger said of the 8 May event: "It was just one of those spontaneous things. They were having a laugh and several kids just started painting play workers' faces."

Fifteen young people with disabilities including Down Syndrome, autism, epilepsy, and hearing impairment attended the event.

While the children had creative fun in the specialist crèche, parents attended a meeting at the Bathhouse Nursery on Shacklewell Lane to find out how to influence services for their children. Last year, HiP organisers secured a £10,000 Government grant to set up the forum.

Roz added: "We set up HiP to improve carer-parent participation in the planning stage of caring for children with disabilities.

"Since last year, we've run carer training and sought to get parents' views across by directly talking to them, rather than just giving out leaflets and telephone numbers. We also try to reach parents who don't have English as their first language.

"In the future, we'd like to further improve parents' confidence when speaking to professionals to suggest how things can work better. It's a two-way process for both parents and professionals to work together for children with disabilities."

Carers' conference

CARERS are invited to attend a free event at Hackney Town Hall on 15 June.

The annual Carers' Conference offers a chance for residents to have their say about the support they can get from the Council and partners; meet other carers; and find out about free training and employment support; as well as how adult social care is changing. They can also have their blood pressure checked, enjoy lunch, and apply for a free Carers' Card, which offers concessionary rates of up to 50 per cent at Council leisure centres, and discounts at local shops.

Carers are unpaid and look after family, a partner or friend in need of help because they are ill, frail or have a disability. Other events

NEWS IN BRIEF

Stroke sessions

INFORMATION on local services for stroke survivors and their carers is on offer at a new monthly drop-in session. On 28 May, the Stroke Project will provide information for anyone affected by stroke, minor stroke or transient ischaemic attack, which is sometimes referred to as a 'mini stroke'.

The service will also include talks from guest speakers, and advice on stroke prevention. Sessions will then continue on every last Friday of the month.

The project falls under the umbrella of TLC Care Services, a registered Hackney-based charity that works with people with disabilities, illness, frailty and carers.

The Stroke Project drop-in takes place, from 12noon to 3pm, at Hackney Central Library, 1 Reading Lane, E8.

Following the line

By Ed Lyon, Archives
Customer Service Assistant

WHEN Dalston Junction station shut its gates for the last time in June 1986, Hackney lost one of its rail link to the City.

The closure marked the end of an era, and its re-opening as part of the East London line redevelopment begins a new chapter in Hackney's long association with the railway. The new line, with bright stations and frequent, fast trains will open new transport links for work and leisure.

Passenger trains first ran through Hackney, to Fenchurch Street, in September 1850 on the East & West India Docks & Birmingham Junction Railway. By 1853, this unwieldy name had been replaced, after an act of Parliament, by the North London Railway. The line's popularity led to the construction of another new route, from Broad Street Station – now the Broadgate Centre – to Dalston Junction, stopping at Shoreditch and Haggerston, before the line divided, continuing to Poplar and points west.

Bomb damage caused disruption in both the First and Second World Wars; in 1915 a bomb dropped from a Zeppelin landed beside Broad Street causing severe damage to the roof, while in the Second World War Haggerston station was closed in May 1940, due to bomb damage. It was bombed again in October that year. Bomb damage to tracks also led to the closure of Shoreditch station in 1941.

After 1945, the route entered a slow decline. Freight and passenger traffic fell, and the 1963 Beeching Report recommended the closure of passenger services between Broad Street and Richmond. Although reprieved, the line suffered a succession of service reductions and station closures. Occasionally there were temporary revivals – a 1972 marketing initiative allowed travel anywhere between Broad Street and Richmond for 25p. In 1976, the GLC provided £150,000 to increase train frequency from two to three an hour. But despite the revival of the North London Line at the end of the 1970s, the route continued to deteriorate.

By the early 1980s, only a few trains ran via Dalston Junction to Broad Street. British Rail, having decided to renovate Liverpool Street station and increase its capacity, called for developers to submit plans for the Broad Street site. Redevelopment began in 1985, while the station was still open. On 27 June 1986, Dalston Junction shut, followed three days later by what remained of Broad Street.

An extension of the East London Line to Dalston was mooted in 1989, and further schemes followed through the 1990s. These foundered on funding. This difficulty was overcome in 2001, and the new line has been financed by a Private Finance Initiative scheme. The London Overground now connects Hackney to parts of the capital that were hard to reach. When the line gets to Highbury & Islington in 2011, Hackney will be fully embedded in the Tube network.

Pieces of history

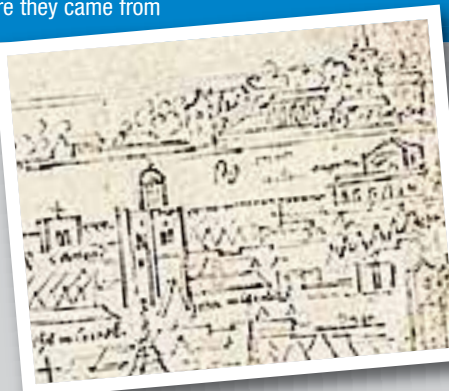

An archaeologist studying one of the columns (above) and a drawing of Holywell Priory where they came from

PRIORY columns from the 12th century unearthed by the Museum of London are to be returned home to Hackney.

The two pillars were discovered during archaeological investigations by the Museum with Transport for London (TfL) along the route of the newly opened East London line. It was discovered that the columns came from the medieval Holywell Priory, which was mostly demolished in 1539 during Henry VIII's dissolution of the monasteries. The priory was on at the present-day Holywell Lane. The columns are currently being studied at the museum, but are due to be moved to the borough later in the year.

RESIDENTS thinking about riding a moped or scooter can now get a head start on road safety.

A free, theory course and discounted on-road training programme will be available to new learners from June.

The Council's road safety team will be offering potential riders, who live, work or attend further education in the borough,

Scoot safely with free training sessions

the opportunity to participate in a free course aimed at improving road safety awareness, as well as providing practical advice.

Courses will consist of two theory sessions that include information on hazards and the consequences of accidents on the road; legislation for riders; safety equipment; buying a vehicle; the Compulsory Basic Training (CBT); passing the Driving Standards Agency motorcycle test; and ongoing 'post test' rider training. The courses will also provide free road safety resources for young and new riders. Anyone who completes a course will also receive a 50 per cent voucher off their CBT training, which must be completed before a learner motorcycle rider is allowed on the road with L-plates.

Participants do not have to own a vehicle, but must have a provisional motorcycle licence or full motor car licence with provisional moped/scooter entitlement, which they will need to take part in the on-road CBT training.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The first Age of Wheels session on 15 May

On your bike – with confidence

FANCY some free cycle training? Then drop in to the Evelyn Court estate in Hackney Downs for some professional advice from STA Bikes.

Organised by the Evelyn Court Association of Tenants (ECAT), the events – called 'The Age of Wheels' – aim to be fun and informative. They are open to all ages and abilities, with spare bikes available if needed.

The first session on the estate's basketball courts took place on 15 May and was well-attended by enthusiastic cyclists. More events are set to take place between 12noon and 3pm on 29 May, and 12 and 19 June.

To book a space on one of the sessions and for more info call: 07740 647 486.

Get ready for cycle hire

ROADSHOWS will soon be coming to Hackney where Transport for London staff will give advice and demonstrations on how to use London's new Cycle Hire scheme.

Residents and visitors to the borough will be able to pick up and drop off bikes at 14 locations across Hackney, when the London Cycle Hire scheme launches on 30 July. The scheme means residents can use a bike and leave it in any of the 400 docking stations being installed in Zone One. The first roadshow will be on 5 June at London Fields westside, as part of the BeReCreative festival, from 12pm to 6pm. More roadshows are planned for later in the year. Works have been taking place over the last few months installing the foundations for cycle docking points in Hoxton and Shoreditch.

The rest of the works will take place between 7 June and 30 July and residents close to the docking stations will receive further information closer to the time.

Where cycle hire docking stations are being installed in place of parking bays, the new use will come into effect on 7 June, after which time cars will no longer be able to use them. For more info visit: www.tfl.gov.uk/cyclehire

Cycle hire is due to launch in Hackney on 30 July

Job Profile Patricia Narebor

Head of Commercial in Legal and Democratic Services talks to Hackney Today about the trainee solicitor role

What are the main attractions of the role?

This is a great opportunity as there is a very high demand for trainee solicitor positions. Completing a training position like this is a pre-requisite for anyone wanting to qualify as a solicitor.

What are the main responsibilities?

The Law Society requires trainees to gain experience in a number of key contentious and non-contentious areas of law, so the successful candidate will work across a wide range of areas. This could include working in the Litigation section dealing with children's or adult services. Working in the Commercial section may involve planning, property, procurement and licensing law. The role really allows the trainee to gain a broad experience base.

What attributes will the successful candidate have?

They will have to demonstrate that they are resilient and have the ability to think on their feet. They'll need to be an effective problem solver who can apply the law practically to specific situations. We're looking for a good team player who can work with other lawyers, and know when to use their initiative and when to be guided by more senior colleagues.

What career opportunities could it lead to?

Because it is a required element of becoming a qualified solicitor, this training opens the door to a full career in law. The range of areas the successful candidate will work in gives them a chance to see if there is a particular one they would like to specialise in. A career in local authority law is extremely rewarding and this role can give someone the opportunity to experience that first hand.

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of the Water House – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch.

Here, new recruit James Blonde shares a recipe for fish soup.

"We have to be genuinely sparing with what we take from our seas these days, and to make it worthwhile taking anything at all, it is incredibly important that we make the most of it, squeezing all the great flavour and texture out of the produce that we do use.

"This soup relies on a flavourful stock that can be prepared in advance. The fish is dropped into the soup at the last minute before serving it so that it is cooked to absolute perfection and not a second more," he said.

Fish Soup

Ingredients

- 2kg of either farmed English trout, red mullet, pollock, or dab. Get your fishmonger to fillet the fish reserving you the skin and bones for your stock. Only the gills are best left out as they will give your stock a slightly bitter flavour. Remove any small bones from your fillets with tweezers
- 1 tsp fennel seeds
- 2 star anise
- 1 cup cream
- 50g butter
- 1 tbsp sunflower oil, or any other oil with a high smoke point
- Zest of 1 lemon
- 2 shallots, finely chopped
- 4 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 2 heads fennel
- 2 glasses white wine
- 25ml Pernod
- 4 generous slices of white bread, rubbed with garlic and cut into cubes then fried in butter to make croutons.

Method

- Chop or crush the fennel seeds and sweat in a dry pan for stock; as they begin to crackle remove from the pan and reserve. Let pan cool
- Add a knob of butter and sunflower oil followed by the shallots, garlic and star anise
- As soon as they begin to colour add the skin, bones and fish heads, and lemon zest
- Deglaze the pan with white wine when the fish starts to stick and then add water to cover. Bring to a lively simmer for 20 minutes, then strain the liquid and return to the heat
- Reduce the stock a little until it has a strong punchy flavour, then add the cream and Pernod and simmer for a few minutes until the alcohol has evaporated
- To serve, warm the stock to a gentle simmer and ladle into bowls. Drop in fish and decorate with croutons and lemon zest. By the time you've carried it to the table, the fish will be cooked to perfection.

Top tips

- Those gills you won't be cooking with, are a great way to judge the freshness of fish. A bright red lipstick appearance is good news. They become paler and browner as decay starts to take effect.

Street drinking ban

FOLLOWING a Council consultation carried out between October and December last year, plans to give police new borough-wide powers to confiscate alcohol from anti-social drinkers come into force on 24 May.

In total, 495 people responded to the consultation, with 63 per cent in favour of a borough-wide Controlled Drinking Area (CDA), while 29 per cent were opposed to it.

The comments of those who responded to the survey were also analysed and two main themes

The DPPO is not aimed at people enjoying a glass of wine or bottle of beer in the park emerged. One related to concerns about the police using a new power proportionately, and the other related to the vulnerability of some of the people involved, such as street drinkers.

Both these issues were taken into account when planning the implementation phase of the CDA.

The new powers are not aimed at those enjoying a beer or glass of wine in a Hackney park, but at a small number of people whose excessive drinking is a threat or a nuisance to other people.

Under the new powers, police are able to ask people to stop drinking, and confiscate their alcohol if they refuse. Officers can also give £50 fixed penalty notices to drinkers who do not instantly comply.

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

Following the recent election, some councillors have yet to confirm surgery details. Please check the next edition of Hackney Today on 7 June for a full list of times and venues

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/I-mayor-cabinet-councillors

Hackney Council is committed to improving services, increasing opportunities for all, and making a safer, cleaner, greener borough. Here we focus on a service that helps to make this possible:

SHAPING UP

Ladi Ajayi, Leisure & Physical Activity Development Manager

Ladi re-joined the Council a year ago, having worked for Hackney on two previous occasions. He has a long track record in leisure, sports and community development for local authorities in London and the surrounding counties. He leads a team of three staff, including a football development officer. Between them they are responsible for developing opportunities for Hackney residents to participate in and enjoy physical activity. This includes developing partnerships with voluntary organisations to deliver programmes in schools, and co-ordinating borough sports teams to compete in events such as the London Youth Games and Mini Marathon. Ladi said: "It gives me great satisfaction when I know that the work that we as a team do has a great effect in enhancing the lives of people who live, work or just visit the borough. Participating in sport and physical activity can be an extremely powerful and positive influence on changing life chances for all age groups, abilities and cultural backgrounds."

Do you provide services for local people?

Are you ready for personalisation?

Adult social care in Hackney is changing. By the end of this year people will be able to choose services they want and pay for them using a personal budget from the Council.

If you provide social care, health, wellbeing, advocacy, or brokerage services to local people, it is likely your organisation will need to change the way it works to operate in this new environment.

Make sure you're ready. Come to a FREE conference on Thursday 24 June 2010.

- Hear from key-note speakers and Hackney Council leaders
- Help shape the market you will be operating in
- Find out about training sessions and options
- Take advantage of networking opportunities over lunch

your care, your way
